OLD LOVE REVIVED.

remarkable romance in real life has cantly been rounded off in Oregon. Set twenty-nine years ago James and went to work for a farmer named sold, in Jackson County, Ore., and a seaths late married Arnold's stepusher. Boon after trouble arose because the two men, Arnold took his states. Boon after trouble arose because the two men, Arnold took his states away from Hard, and when the twent after her the two men quarked, and the result was Arnold was shot ad and Hard field the State. His wife cured a divorce and remarried. Her shand died a few years ago.

These years ago Hard returned to be mitrder of Arnold and sent to be positionic County, was recognised, arrested the mitrder of Arnold and sent to be positionically for a long term. Durals trial his former wife visited him suantly, the old love revived, and she orded her hardest to secure his release, to circulate a petition for his pardon, after two years her efforts were secesful, and Hard was released.

I few days ago the two ware reunited marriage near their first home.

CLARENCE STILL HOPEFUL

He Expects Some Foreign Power to Restor Him to His Throne in the Mosquito Reservation.

1894, by the Press Publishing Compan New York World.) (Special Cable Despatch to The World.)
BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Dec. 18. Barrister, Chief Clarence's intimate friend, arrived hre yesterday. He reports that 'he Indians favor Clarence's return to power, and that he expects some foreign power to reinstate him on

Jan. 25. The Nicaraguans are taxing imports 55 per cent. In lieu of the for KINGSTON, Jamaica, Dec. 12.—The stream of refugees from Bluefields has now pretty well stopped. The newcom-ers are distributed over the country, the greater number settling in Kingston, where some have got into business, but greater number settling in Kingston, where some have got into business, but others find themselves in a deplorably destitute condition. Among the former is Mr. Hatch, ex-British Consul, who has leased the Cafe Royal, alias London Tavern, and where, assisted by the ex-Customs Officer as bartender, he caters to the thirst and occasionally to the hunger of the Royal Mail contingent of coal carriers and other citizens. Markland Taylor, ex-proprietor and editor of the Bluefields Messenger, is having a very hard time of it, although this is his native land.

Ex-Chief Ciarence has discarded his uniform and toy sword, and appears now in immaculate white, topped by a millitary helmet. He is seldom seen on foo. He rides a bicycle most of the time, and cuts a more or less straight line through the mud, according to the progress just made in the direction of his artistic ambition to decorate the town with vermillion. He draws three guineas a day from the Imperial Exchequer, and apparently thinks that he will continue to do so to the end of the chapter. When deeply engaged in his artistic occupation he may be interviewed by any one who cares to hear him spout, and at such times he is full of plans for securing aid from Mexico or Colombia to restore him to the Mosquito, the fact that both the United States and Great British have a voice in the matter and the fact that the Mosquitos have themselves accepted Nicaraguan jurisdiction.
